SCATHING DENOUNCEMENT OF REPUBLICAN CONVENTION PASSED BY GATHERING.

ROOSEVELT DICTATION

Progressive Gathering Inaugurate the Boom for Roosevelt Just As Strenuous Colonel Would Wish.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Jackson, Mich., July 20.—All hope of settling their differences in caucus having been abandoned, the "stub" and "full" ticket factions of the new progressive party entered the convention today to end the fight on the floor.

Both sides were determined, but neither was too confident of the outcome. It was said that Frank W. Knox, who was leading the "stub" ticket crowd, would be content if the convention named Roosevelt presidential electors and passed the endorsement of Gov. Osborne, provided a full ticket was not put in the field. Theodore M. Joslyn, at the head of the "full" ticket forces, said he hoped to win his fight for state congressional and legislative ticket, but that if it appeared the majority of the convention was favorable to the "stub" ticket, he would acquiesce and follow the crowd.

Leaders got some comfort out of the feeling that regardless of which side won the progressives would leave the hall united for the fight. The resolutions, which were not completed until early this morning, were to be submitted by Senator Joseph M. Dixon, Colonel Roosevelt's campaign manager, before the convention passed on them.

A "full" ticket embracing presidential electors and state congressional and legislative candidates will be placed in the field by the first state progressive convention here today. This plan was decided on today after Senator Joseph Dixon, Col. Roosevelt's campaign manager had arrived and conferred with a number of progressive leaders.

NOVEL FEATURES IN CAMPAIGN PLANNED

Suggested That Wilson Talk From Same Platform With Late Opponents For Nomination.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Seagirt, N. J., July 20.—A novel method of campaigning has been proposed for Governor Wilson's consideration by several members of the national committee. The members would have the governor speak from the same platform with each of his opponents for the nomination at Baltimore and in their home state.

Their proposal is that he speak at St. Louis with Champ Clark, at Cincinnati or Cleveland with Governor Harmon, at Boston with Governor Foss, at Hartford, Connecticut, or New Haven with Governor Baldwin, at Indianapolis with Governor Marshall, at New York with Mayor Gaynor and at Birmingham, Ala., with Rep. Underwood.

Instead of traveling to North Dakota to speak there with Gov. Burke, the proposal is that Gov. Wilson and the North Dakota executive "speak from the same platform at St. Paul. Gov. Wilson has reached no decision as to what speeches he will make or what trips he will undertake during the campaign.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, July 20.—Dissolution plans of the National Packing company were expected to be submitted today, district attorney James H. Wilkerson, the federal officer who prosecuted the Chicago packers for alleged violation of the anti-trust provisions of the Sherman law.

"There will be no mere paper dissolution of the National Packing company," said Mr. Wilkerson today. "The plan the packers will present must contain absolute provision for the dissolution of all the assets of the National Packing company. In other words, the disintegration of the assets of the holding organization must be a real matter and no provisions that would afterward develop into a 'paper' dissolution will be sanctioned."

FATAL ACCIDENT DUE TO CARELESSNESS

Youth Blown to Bits by Dynamite Left Around Warehouse.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Manitowish, July 20.—That Joseph Malata, who was killed in the explosion of dynamite here Friday afternoon was the victim of some one else's carelessness is the generally accepted theory of the accident, the true facts of which, however, will probably never be known. Malata had visited the warehouse to check up stock and was engaged in nailing a box of dynamite which a farmer who had recently taken supply from the warehouse had left uncovered and it is supposed the concussion from the blows of the hammer caused the explosion.

GAMBLER MURDERED TO SEAL HIS LIPS?

New York Police Connected With Death of Man Who Made Charges of Gambling Grafting.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, July 20.—The gang of gun men and block jockers that riddled Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, with bullets, is believed, by detectives, today, to have been procured by "Black Jack" Rose under pressure of the "police system" which was seeking to effectually close the mouth of Rosenthal against further charges that gamblers had to divide their gains with the police. Shapiro, driver of the "murder car," has told the enough details to cause the police prosecutor to believe that the private detectives will soon round up the sets of gun fighters whom the police have failed to arrest but that the gambling plot and murder plot will lead far deeper into the police department is now generally believed.

PRESENT ARGUMENTS IN SCHWITZ CASE

Hearing Today in Case Against Marinette County Sheriff and Former District Attorney.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Marinette, July 20.—Arguments in the Schwitz hearing on the charges preferred to the governor are being made today. In a series of cases in which arrests have been made by the chief of police and Schwitz had put in bills to the county, Schwitz testified the illegal bills had been put in by mistake and that the fees were legally due to the chief of police and not to himself. In the Couley case in which the prosecutor charged that Schwitz defrauded the county of $493 by putting in bills for services not rendered, Schwitz made no defense. Commissioner Kesserschmidt intimated that unless Schwitz made a defense on the Couley charge, he could hardly expect finding Schwitz guilty on that charge.

SAYS DISSOLUTION WAS NOT ORDERED

Chairman of Steel Trust Investigation Says Report of Committee Recommendations Is Untrue.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Washington, July 20.—Chairman Stanley of the House steel trust investigation committee today authorized a denial of reports that the committee would recommend the dissolution of the United States steel corporation.

Mr. Stanley declared he believed that reports given out to that effect had been calculated to affect the New York stock market. They will propose to amend the act creating the department of commerce and labor to make the investigations of the bureau available to congress as well as the president.

The majority of the committee also has agreed to a proposed amendment of the Sherman act giving any injured party the right to sue on an equality with the government to enforce a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

Treasurer of Bryan's Last Campaign Tells Who Contributed To Nebraska Funds.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, July 20.—Hermann Ridder, treasurer of the democratic national committee in 1908, today produced for the inspection of the senate committee investigating campaigns of official reports of the committee receipts and expenditures he had filed with the secretary of state of New York in 1908.

J. J. Martin, private secretary to the secretary of state produced the reports as official custodian of them. These showed the total receipts were $620,644.77 and the total expenditures were $619,410.06.

Mr. Ridder told the committee he raised the money for William J. Bryan's last presidential fight. "I was the largest contributor," said Mr. Ridder. "I gave $37,000. Mr. Bryan made a rule that no one should contribute more than $10,000 so $10,000 was subscribed in my name and each of my sons gave $5,000."

"Did August Belmont contribute anything in 1908?" asked chairman Clapp.

"No, he did not," said Mr. Ridder. Mr. Belmont told the committee recently he contributed about $250,000 to the democratic national committee in 1904.

"Did Mr. Thomas F. Ryan contribute in 1908?" continued Senator Clapp.

"No, he did not."

"Might they have contributed to some one else?"

"No, I am sure they did not through Mr. Sheehan because the amount he contributed was too small."

Tammany Hall contributed $10,000. Mr. Ridder told the committee and Robert Ewing of New Orleans collected $7,000 mostly in 5 and 10 cent pieces. The witness recalled with the aid of the official record that 25,000 names were enrolled on the list of contributors. He gave the names of a number who contributed amounts ranging from $500 to $3,900.

GAME WARDEN TESTS SHOW GOOD RESULTS

Guardians of State Fish and Game Stand High in Examinations Indicating Their Efficiency.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., July 20.—Results of the promotional examinations under the merit system applied to game wardens in Wisconsin were announced today by State Game Warden John A. Shultz.

The examinations were held July 14, being supervised by Dr. T. S. Palmer of the biological survey. Washington, D. C., who afterwards told President C. E. Buel of the Wisconsin civil service commission that the game warden department of Wisconsin as it is constituted today is the best in the United States. In addition to oral and written examinations each warden was given a careful medical test equal to that required by the army.

Under the re-organization plan for the department, a class of supervising wardens is created. These men are capable of doing the work of the state fish and game warden should necessity require his absence, and the following wardens qualified for promotion to this class as vacancies occur: Charles Thompson, Madison, 82.5 percent; B. A. Cleasby, Portage, 79 percent; C. F. Asmuth, Madison, 78.5 percent; D. M. Cranston, Richland Center, now at Marinette, 73 percent. When acting in this service payment of $4 per day will be made. The chief warden may select any two from this class to take up his work in his absence.

Standings for selection for inland or transportation services were attained by the following, with rank according to the order named: B. A. Cleasby, Portage, 92.3; J. H. Boomer, Madison, 90.3; Val Raeth, Milwaukee, 90.3; Charles Thompson, Madison, 90.3; C. F. Asmuth, Madison, 90; D. M. Cranston, Richland Center, 87.9; Compensation is $3.50 per day.

Results of the examinations in Grade B, service mostly in inland waters were as follows, the list including all persons receiving a standing of 75 percent and less than 90: P. McNaughton, Superior, 87.1; Michael Kleist, Kenosha, 86.4; J. G. Keeler, Bagley, 86.2; W. F. Elliott, White-water, 85.5; F. K. Randall, Phillips, 85.5; W. A. Cole, Vesper, 85.4; A. A. CHARGED WITH PERJURING SELF IN HENNING-FUNK TRIAL, MISS AILEEN HEPPNER MUST FACE GRAND JURY IN CHICAGO Enjoying her liberty only because someone was willing to sign her $5,000 bail bond, Miss Aileen Heppner is awaiting the action of a grand jury in Chicago, charged with perjury.

The story of how Miss Heppner has gotten into the "hands of the law" throws an interesting side-light on the Senator Lorimer scandal. Clarence S. Funk, general manager of the International Harvester Company, testified in one of the Lorimer hearings that he had been approached by Edward Hines, who has boasted that he helped "put Lorimer over." Hines, he said, had asked for a contribution of $10,000 to be used in securing Lorimer to the senate.

Some time later, a suit was brought against Funk by John C. Henning for alienation of his wife's affections. Henning lost the case, and disappeared. Then Mrs. Henning confessed before a grand jury that the suit was a "frame-up" for the purpose of destroying Funk's character and discrediting his testimony in the Lorimer case. She said she did not know of the suit until told by her husband that it had been commenced, and that she had never seen Funk.

Miss Heppner testified on the trial that she had seen Funk and Mrs. Henning together on various occasions. An effort was made by Miss Heppner's attorneys to have the perjury charges against her dropped, but without success.

RECESS WELCOMED IN DARROW TRIAL

State and Defense Hold Conferences Today in Regard to Tactics When Case is Resumed Monday.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Los Angeles, July 20.—The suspension of the bribery trial of Clarence S. Darrow over today and tomorrow was apparently welcome to both sides in the long drawn out struggle. Both sides held conferences throughout the day—the defense to arrive at a decision as to the next witness to be placed upon the stand and the prosecution to determine whether permanent business men would be called in the state's effort to controvert the story told on the stand Thursday and Friday by Lincoln Steffens. Chief Counsel Rogers of the defense said that probably the next witness would not be decided upon until Monday.

IMMEDIATE ACTION IS NOT NECESSARY

Governor McGovern Urges Postponement of Action on Electoral Resignations.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Madison, July 20.—That a meeting of the republican state central committee should not be held to take action on the resignation of presidential electors until the political atmosphere is clarified is the opinion of Governor McGovern. Three electors have said they would not vote for President Taft if elected. It was originally the plan of the committee to meet next week, but as there is no immediate necessity for action on the matter it is understood it might not be held until after the primaries.

SPORT SHOTS

by Dan McCorty

"If Mike Gibbons should visit England he'd be all the rage," says Jim Maloney, manager of Bombardier Wells. "Englishmen rave over great boxers, but they've never seen the equal of Gibbons. He is in a class by himself. Why? Because he's got brains and knows how to fool the other fellow completely. I notice that his feinting is marvelous. He has a clever way of avoiding swings. He's made a study of the boxing game, and I'd like to predict that if he ever meets Eddie McGoorty he'll win easily. I'd bet him five to one on it. I believe he'd also win over Klaus on points."

Here is a piece of encouragement for the ambitious youth who looks forward to a baseball career, but as yet has been unable to get a league job: Johnny McGraw, of the New York Giants was once tickled to death to get $2 for his services in pitching a game. It was in 1889 when McGraw was sixteen years old. In 1912, when thirty-nine years of age, Mr. J. J. McGraw is serving the second year of a five year contract as manager of the New York Giants at a salary of $18,000 a year.

Eddie Plank is still in the lead in American league pitching records. His average at present is .357.

Big league scouts have given the Central league circuit a wide berth thus far this year. With a rule that fixes the draft price at $1200 instead of $750, as it was last year, class B clubs will have to turn out some pretty fine specimens to attract attention, and this they have failed to do. Most of the best youngsters have already been captured by the majors, and it would be poor picking in the Central for the gum shoe brigade.

Only four American league pitchers have stolen a base this season, and not one of them has stolen more than a single base. The four speedy ones are Johnson, Kahler, Coombs and Ford.

The New York Nationals have bought Pitcher Paddy Green of the Connecticut league for $8,000, the highest price ever paid for a player in the league. Green never pitched professional ball until last April, when he joined Holyoke.

Foreman, shortstop of the Kankakee club of the Illinois-Missouri league, executed a spectacular unassisted play in a recent game between Champaign and Kankakee. In the first inning, Sullivan and Fleming of Champaign had hit safely and were on the first and second sacks when Lane drove a liner between second and short. The diamond was unusually heavy and in a slipping and sliding manner Foreman made a lunge for the ball, grabbing it with one hand about one foot from the ground. Both Sullivan and Fleming, thinking it a safe hit, dashed forward, with Foreman, ball in hand, stepping on second, thereby putting out the astonished Fleming at a point half way between first and second.

If Bill Sweeney and Hub Perdue should start on a summer tour of Europe the Boston Braves would drop out of the sporting page. Within a few weeks the Winston-Salem team climbed out of the cellar and is now making a great fight for the pennant in the Carolina Association.

The Cubs and Pirates have been showing considerable speed of late, and may be able yet to give battle to the Giants for the National League fabric.

July 7 every game played in the Texas league was a shut-out. The results were: Austin, 4; Fort Worth, 0; Beaumont, 2; Houston, 0; San Antonio, 7; Galveston, 0; Dallas, 2; Waco, 0. The South Bend club of the Central league, has released Jesse Tannehill, the former big league pitcher, and signed Frankie Donohue, a brother of Jiggs Donohue.

The Washington and Detroit teams have furnished the big surprise in the American League race. A year ago Detroit was leading and Washington was in seventh place. This season Washington is fighting for the pennant while Detroit is trying to break into the dungeon.

YOUNG MEN IN FIELD FOR GOLF CONTESTS

Rivals for State Championship Largely Made Up of Men Under Twenty-five—Al. Schaller a Favorite.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Milwaukee, Wis., July 20.—Monday will see a big influx of golfers from all parts of the state for the state golf tournament which opens on Tuesday, and many of the up-state men are already here for the fun, getting accustomed to the course.

The field for the championship will be largely made up, it is expected, of youngsters, golfers not over 22 or 23 years, but the tourney will be of equal interest to the older players for there will be special events for every sort of a golfer. The entry list is expected to be close to 150 players.

The favorites for the first sixteen, the championship division, which will fight down to the title by elimination, includes at the head, of course, E. P. Allis, III., of Milwaukee, titleholder, probably better known as Ned. As club mates he will have A. R. Hinkley, Louis Allis, L. W. Neman as chief candidates for the title division. Kenosha has a bid in for the title with a big field, including former Champion R. P. Cavanaugh, Charles C. Allen, runner-up last year, Gordon Yule, Malcolm Kohler, Chester Barnes, but the three Pettis, all strong contenders, will not be here. Blue Mound will have a big field of entries, and among the probable qualifiers are Price M. Davis, club champion; H. S. Hadfield, 1910 runner-up for the state title; J. J. Hosch, while Dr. I. H. Fowle, 1910 club champion, a member of the 1911 qualifying flight, will also try to duplicate last year's performance. Hosch was a semi-finalist last year, being defeated by Allen.

From up the state there will be several youngsters of talent, including notable Phil and Kenneth Dickinson of Appleton, Harold Wyatt of Fond du Lac, Harold Genter and Edmund Voach of Sheboygan and several of the older players are of a class that may get them into the top sixteen. A new contender this year, a stranger to most of the players, is M. A. Carroll of Oshkosh, former Chicago city champion, who has moved to Wisconsin and become a resident of the state and a member of the Algoma club. He is likely to be a strong finisher in the state title event.

Al. Schaller, the Janesville veteran, is expected, with a big field of players from his club, and Madison will be well represented also.

Among the older players will be Judge L. A. Pratt of Wausau, former

POINTERS FOR THE MOTORIST ON IMPORTANCE OF INFLATION

Of all questions relatives to the preservation of pneumatic tires that of inflation is the most important.

Of the tires tested, says the Michelin expert on cars which stop at factory a full 60 percent are found to be under-inflated, while of the tires sent in for repairs nearly 60 percent have suffered from this cause.

There are many ways aside from punctures and blow-outs in which the air pressure in a tire can sink below normal. The valve may not be air tight, or if the tire is new it may expand slightly when first used, with a consequent reduction in pressure.

Moreover, rubber while practically air tight is not entirely so and the air will gradually filter through into the atmosphere. Air is composed chiefly of oxygen and nitrogen. The coefficient of diffusion of oxygen through rubber is higher than that of nitrogen, and in consequence the pressure in a recently inflated tire decreases in proportion to the diffusion of the oxygen. When the tire is re-inflated the proportion of nitrogen within the tire of course becomes larger. So long as the original air remains in the tire this proportion continues to increase with every inflation and thus the loss by diffusion becomes gradually smaller.

The temperature of the outer air is responsible only for the very slightest changes in the interior air pressure of a tire. These changes are so slight as to be negligible.

Over-inflation likewise is injurious—not to the tire so much as to the car. An over-inflated tire has little or no resiliency and thus transmits shocks to the chassis, which under incessant jarring is bound to suffer.

It is obviously necessary therefore to keep the tires pumped up to just the right pressure. The only way to accomplish this is frequently to use a pressure tester.

War on Rats.

Rats on ships do several million dollars of damage to cargoes every year, to say nothing of the carrying of diseases. Rat-killing virus is used successfully on shipboard, but some of the rats become immune to the disease which the virus causes. This is not so bad, because the rats which are not killed by the virus, but have gotten used to it, carry virus disease to other rats, and these in turn are killed by the disease.

The Kinds of Lies.

A Chicago university professor, after exhaustive research, has discovered there are ten different kinds of lies. Under his classification there are the fantasy or fairy tale lie, the vainglorious or boasting lie, the defensive lie, the heroic lie, the white or permissible lie, the society lie, the business lie, the art lie, and the adulterative lie.

Vision Needs Distance.

Objects which are usually the motives of our travels by land and sea are often overlooked and neglected if they lie under our eye.—Pilot the Younger.

DEMOCRATS WILL RUN FOR COUNTY OFFICES

To Hold Meeting Next Week and Arrange to Place Candidates' Petitions in Circulation.
Hopeful of success in the national and state elections and desiring to trench themselves in every precinct, the Democrats have decided to place in the field a full slate of candidates for Rock county offices. A meeting will be called for some day next week to launch candidacies, initiate booms, and arrange for the circulation of candidates' petitions to that their papers may be filed by August 3, as the law requires. Cards announcing the time and purpose of the meeting will be sent to Democratic committeemen and other party leaders, and they will be urged to muster as large and as representative an attendance as possible.
Nomination papers for the Democratic candidates for state offices were received by County Chairman E. H. Connell yesterday and they are now being placed in the hands of the circulators. These as well as the nomination papers for county offices, must be returned by August 3, in order to get them on the ticket, and as the time that remains is short their circulation will have to be carried on energetically. Mr. Connell will devote himself to this work and make a thorough canvass of the county.
The out-and-out opponents of the income tax law are boosting the candidacy of Judge Karel, and to unify their forces will within a few days perfect the organization of a Karel club. The nomination of Karel, say his supporters, would bring to the support of the democratic ticket a large number of disaffected republicans, as well as hold in line the true-blue democrats.

In order that the young women may learn to the requisites of a good home, they are given some instruction in architecture, including a thorough study of such things as the merits of different building sites, arrangements of floor space, drainage and ventilation systems, water supply, lighting and heating. Practice in drawing skeleton floor plans and elevations of houses suited to various conditions is also afforded.
One special advanced course in the department considers housing problems both in the city and in the country and a study of the effects of poor housing on inmates. The complete course in home economics covers four years and leads to the degree of Bachelor of Science.

J. Z. M'LAY GUEST AT DUKE'S LUNCHEON

Janesville Man, Acting as Judge at Winnipeg Fair, Seated at Royal Table With Duke of Connaught.
James Z. Mc Lay, of this city, who is acting as the judge of the heavy horse class at the Winnipeg Fair held this week in the Canadian metropolis, was honored on Monday last with an invitation to take luncheon with H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught. The Manitoba Free Press and News Bulletin in describing the luncheon, says:

JAMES Z. M'LAY.

in the directors' banquet hall at the industrial exhibition. As has always been the case His Royal Highness was accorded an uproarious welcome when he entered the dining hall escorted by A. A. Gilroy. Three hearty cheers shook the building, which the Duke acknowledged with a bow and then took his seat under the canopy of flags.
The floral decorations this afternoon were vases filled with Dyanthus barbatus, commonly known as Sweet Williams, in shades of light and dark. Masses of ferns flanked the table opposite the Duke and long training vines of asperula and gypsophylla studded with sweet william, covered the center of the tables, which remained in the positions they have occupied during the week at all the luncheons.
His Royal Highness arrived a few minutes before 1 o'clock when he at once held an informal reception in the directors' board room. He was accompanied by Capt. A. F. Sladen, Capt. Buller and Capt. Berkeley, who had charge of the arrangements for the main gates, driving directly to the directors' quarters. Here he was received by the reception committee, consisting of A. A. Gilroy, as president of the exhibition board, Sir Rodmond Roblin, Mayor Waugh, F. J. C. Cox, Dr. A. W. Bell and others. In the reception room Mr. Gilroy introduced the various members of the board of directors who had not already met the duke. Dr. Bell then introduced the prominent agriculturists of Manitoba. His Royal Highness chatted with each one and then the party adjourned to the luncheon hall and were shortly afterwards followed in by the duke. The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity and the gathering today was the most distinguished yet seen at a luncheon. Directly to His Royal Highness' left was seated A. A. Gilroy, to his right, His Honor D. C. Cameron, the lieutenant-governor. To his left in the following order sat Hon. Robert Rogers, Sir William Whyte, Sir Rodmond Roblin, Sir Daniel McMillan, A. M. Nanton, Sanford Evans, Capt. Buller, P. S. Steringer, Capt. Long, F. W. Drewry, Capt. Butler, A. W. Bell, Major Count de Bury and H. Matheson. To the right were Hon. Dr. McGurn, Hon. G. Lawrence, H. Sutherland, Prof. A. Bedford, James Z. Mc Lay, of Janesville, Wis., W. J. Black, Prof. C. P. Bellows, Mayor Gough, A. F. Sladen, D. R. Sprague, Capt. Homer-Dixon.

The same paper also refers to Mr. Mc Lay's work as judge in the ring as follows:
The judge in charge of the classes yesterday afternoon was James Z. Mc Lay of Janesville, Wisconsin, who is familiar to western breeders, as he has judged a number of times at Brandon though this is his first appearance in the Winnipeg rings. His work is always clean, quiet, and rapid and his awards were very generally satisfactory.

LAST RITES TODAY FOR MOTHER AGNES

Funeral Services for Late Mother Superior Held at St. Patrick's Church.
In the presence of a large concourse of priests, sisters, and friends, funeral services were held over the remains of the late Mother Agnes at nine o'clock this morning at St. Patrick's church. The occasion was an unusually impressive one owing to the high esteem in which the deceased was held by all classes. Regardless of creed, the people of Janesville thronged the edifice to pay their last tribute of respect and gratitude to the noble woman whose obsequies were being celebrated. From beginning to end the ceremonies were marked by that beautiful solemnity which is characteristic of the Catholic church. At 8:30 the remains were borne from the convent chapel, the sisters walking in procession behind the casket, bearing lighted candles and chanting the Misere. As the casket was placed before the altar in the church more than thirty priests took their places in the sanctuary and chanted the Office for the Dead. The mass was celebrated by Rev. W. J. Luby of Omro, Wis., a nephew of the deceased. He was assisted by Rev. J. O'Kiefe, Austin, Texas, and Rev. J. J. Harlin of Edgerton. Dean Reilly officiated as master of ceremonies and Rev. J. Mahoney as assistant master of ceremonies. Rev. W. Goebel acted as cross bearer and Rev. J. F. McGinnity as thurifer. Beside the casket knelt the companions of her daily life, the sisters who loved and honored her for her sterling qualities of mind and heart.
At the close of the mass the sermon was delivered by Rev. J. J. Collins who for several years was assistant at St. Patrick's church, this city, and who at present is pastor of St. Joseph's church, Fond du Lac, Wis. It was an eloquent and beautiful tribute to the humble sister whose life was dedicated to works of mercy and charity.
The pall bearers were Messrs. M. Hayes, I. Connors, H. Joyce, P. Kavanaugh, D. W. Hayes, and D. Ryan. Silently and reverently the crowd waited outside the church while the funeral procession was formed, then all wended their way to Mt. Olivet cemetery. There in the over-strewn plot, beside the sisters who had preceded her on the homeward journey, the resurrection morn. The grave was blessed and the last prayers were said by her life-long friend, Rev. J. E. Harlin of Edgerton. Peace be to her gentle, kindly spirit! Rest eternal to her noble and beautiful soul!

The following priests were present: Reverends W. J. Luby, Dean Reilly, J. O'Kiefe, J. E. Harlin, J. J. Collins, M. Downs, E. Aumann, J. Croak, J. Ryan, R. Smith, J. J. McGinnity, C. McBride, J. F. McGinnity, I. Dempsey, J. Buckley, J. Smith, P. Dulan, J. J. Dermott, E. J. Reilly, F. Reilly, T. Pierce, V. Goebel, R. Smith, M. Morton, J. McFarland, H. Murphy, R. Roach. People from out of the city who attend the services were: Mrs. J. Luby of Chicago, Misses M. and A. Luby of Oshkosh, Mrs. L. Luby of Rockford, Mrs. C. F. Gaisse and Mrs. D. Mahoney of Fond du Lac.

SEEK TO INCREASE SCOUT MEMBERSHIP

SCOUTMASTER JAEKE ANXIOUS THAT LARGER NUMBER OF BOYS SHOULD HAVE BENEFITS OF CAMP.

TO KEEP CAMP FILLED

Another Hike Possibly to Palmyra
Will be Organized Shortly According to The Present Plans of Scout Officials.

Through the aid of the present members of the Janesville Boy Scouts a campaign for increased membership was begun today. Scoutmaster Jaeke, in charge of the summer camp at the old chautauqua grounds issued an ultimatum to the boys this morning, declaring that it was absolutely necessary that a larger number be enlisted in the movement to make it worth while. Ten new scouts was the record set for today and indications were that the number would easily be reached.

Mr. Jaeke said this morning that there had been a slump in the attendance at the camp during the latter part of the week owing to various favorite recreation for the scouts everywhere.

There are numerous other suggestions made in connection with the scout work and some of these will doubtless be carried out in the course of the summer. An account of one novel movement undertaken by the scouts in some places which shows the scope and possibility of the scout organization, is given in a recent publication of the scout bulletin. It is in connection with the good roads work. The account is as follows:

The leaders of the Boy Scouts of America are encouraging the boys to make a study of roads and are giving them an inkling of road-building. This is a new form of scouting tending to increase the boy's practical knowledge, to develop his powers of observation and to make him appreciate the economic value of public highways. To the boy who acquires this training, it is likely a merit badge will be awarded by the leaders of the movement. Merit badges are the signs of advanced training in the Scout Movement. The plans for good scouting are being worked out by James E. West, Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America, in co-operation with the Department of Agriculture and with Mrs. A. H. Reeve President of the Good Roads Departments of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers.

To the ordinary boy the road is something on which to walk or drive, nothing more. The boy scout who has been trained to think just what the road means knows that

First Meal of the Day.

Breakfast is, before all things, a respectable meal. One cannot imagine a man or woman who is always down punctually to breakfast being other than a highly reputable member of society. A dinner may be frivolous, a supper may be hilarious, but a breakfast is always staid and solemn and conducive to the building up of a sound and sensible character.

Sees With His Fingers.

Jacob W. Bolotin, though blind from infancy, will complete a course in medicine in the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery this month, and intends to follow the practice of medicine as a profession. He laughs at his handicap and says: "There wasn't a nerve, a sinew, a vein, an artery, a tissue that the eye could behold but I could feel with the tips of my fingers. My fingers are as good as eyes. With them I can detect pulsations, irritations, and temperatures instantly."

Mail Carriers Will Fly.

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. "It cured me of a dreadful cough," writes Mrs. J. F. Davis, Stickney Corner, Me., "after doctor's treatment and all other remedies had failed." For coughs, colds or any bronchial affection its unequalled. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Peoples' Drug Co.

SCENE AT BOY SCOUTS' CAMP UP THE RIVER.

reasons, including cold weather, absence of some of the boys from the city, and waning interest to some extent on the part of others. He said that he realized that it was not possible for the boys to stay at the camp for too long a period and consequently he felt that it was absolutely necessary for the success of the present plan that an increased membership be obtained as soon as possible in order to keep the camp filled with Scouts.

The camps as now organized will accommodate thirty boys and its benefits can best be secured when that number, or as near it as possible, are there a part or all of each day. The present situation is attributed largely to the fact that more boys are needed to enlist in the movement as the success thus far shown by the work done cannot be doubted.

In this connection the scoutmasters and members of the council emphasize the fact that the parents of boys of the age to join the scouts should awaken to the opportunities offered and encourage their boys to take part in the activities. That parents of the boys who are already enrolled are pleased with what has been done is shown by the number of visitors who have called at the camp and in all instances, there has been nothing but words of praise for the manner in which the establishment is conducted.

With his camp routine and rules now firmly in force and with his simple machinery for regulation running smoothly, "Captain" Jaeke is now turning his attention toward various means of keeping the boys occupied while in camp. About one half of the present number enrolled at the camp have employment elsewhere for a part or all of the day, but when in camp and for the others who have but few duties except those connected with their homes, it is necessary to supply various forms of amusement and recreation. Of course the first thing of importance is always the business of keeping the camp in order, cleanly, sanitary, and in a spick and span condition. The matter of preparing the meals also takes up the boys' time, but in addition to that some form of organized sport is found to be a necessity. Consequently a baseball diamond was laid out yesterday morning and one or two and possibly more baseball nines will be organized from the scout ranks.

It will be the plan either to schedule a series of games between the scout teams or without teams of boys from outside. If outside boys are brought in to play with the scout teams it is thought their interest in the scout organization might be aroused as in no other way and that an increased membership would naturally result. It is probable that both schemes will be tried and that a trophy of some sort will be given to the team having the highest average at the end of a certain time.

Scoutmaster Jaeke has it in mind to organize another hike in the near future following the success of the trip to Edgerton over the Fourth. A much larger number of boys would be taken on this second adventure, however, and it is possible that the entire camp equipment would be taken with them to allow for several days' rest at the other end of the journey. This would be especially advisable should they desire to make the trip to Palmyra to which beautiful resort the scouts have been so cordially invited by the business men's club of that place of which Mr. E. B. Heimstreet, formerly of this city, is secretary.

There can be no doubt but that this would be an ideal hike for the scouts and as the distance is not too far it would be possible to take as many as twenty-five or thirty. In order to do this some of the older boys will have to arrange to take their vacations during the week when this trip is planned.

From other cities in the state and throughout the country reports are coming continually in regard to such excursions taken by the scouts and they have met with uniform success. In many cases they have traveled as far as four and five hundred miles and have enjoyed it hugely. In fact aside from the summer camp plan, the long distance hike seems to be the George Washington's calling before he became a soldier was that of a surveyor and highway engineer. The boy scout knows that a smooth level road in the country which is firm in the winter means more days in school. The boy scout in the country also knows that a smooth level road is much better than a muddy broken one because his father can cart 5 and 6 times more produce to market over a smooth road than he can over a rough road.

The aim of the Scout Movement is to train the boys to be interested in roads when out on their hikes. They are taught to observe the grade, the drainage, the maintenance and construction of the road. They are supposed to observe whether there are ruts in the road and whether the drivers make it a point to keep in the ruts. Boy Scouts are supposed to draw maps of the roads and are supposed to know something about the different methods of construction.

Boy Scouts are asked to remove glass and stone from the road thus decreasing the danger of accidents with automobiles and other vehicles. "We must remember," says Samuel W. Racoon, member of the American Road Builders' Association, "that good roads affect the life of our people spiritually, in as it were, bringing our churches nearer to our homes; morally, in making country life so attractive as to counteract the allurements of city life, for the country boy and girl; socially, in drawing our farms and firesides nearer together, thus promoting friendly intercourse and culture; commercially, as a means of travel and traffic; and educationally by bringing the school-house and homes into closer proximity. If our great educational institutions have seen it advantageous to the youth to teach the trades in the schools, why not the world-wide benefit of road building?"

Worthy Modesty.

Alvo Yusuph, chief judge of Bagdad, was remarkable for the modesty which accompanies wisdom. Once, after a long investigation of the facts of a case, he publicly confessed that his knowledge was not sufficient to enable him to decide it. "Pray," said a pert courtier, "do you expect the caliph to pay you for your ignorance?" "I do not," meekly answered the judge; "the caliph pays me well for what I know; if he were to attempt to pay me for what I do not know, the treasures of his empire would not suffice."

Bermuda Industry Threatened.

It is not unlikely that the Bermudan industry of growing Easter lilies for the countries of the world will be seriously affected by the introduction of the Philippine lily, which has a number of advantages over the Bermudan plant. The plants develop in one-third less time and grow more blooms on a plant and are much harder in many respects. They will also bloom repeatedly for several seasons. They can be grown with some success on the Pacific coast and have not yet shown symptoms of the diseases which the Bermuda lily is subject to.

Overland

A FOREWORD ABOUT 1913

And a Word of Advice to the Buyer

THIS will probably throw a little scare into some, but for the man with money to invest in an automobile it is good, sound, practical advice.

Most of you will remember that just before the 1912 season opened, we advised the public to wait and see what we had to offer before they bought.

We promised to save them considerable money. We told them how we could. And we did. Everyone knows that we made good on this. Many followed our advice and profited by doing so. Our famous $900 Touring Car took the country by storm. It proved the equal of any $1200 car shown during the entire 1912 season. To date we have had to refuse a number of orders for this model and more are still pouring in.

Our advice for 1913 is the same as it was for 1912. Wait for the Overland announcement.

We will make our 1913 announcement on August 17th. On this date the public will awaken to still more car for still less money.

The Overland production for 1912 was nearly 25,000 cars. The 1913 production will be 35,000 cars. The great production increase makes possible additional value and still lower scale of prices. As our production increases the cost per car decreases, which accounts for our ability to give more acknowledged car value for less money.

A few weeks wait cannot make much difference to you; yet it will make a big difference by saving you considerable money.

On August 17th you will get all the facts, specifications and particulars. Watch the Gazette on that date.

August 17th Will Be the Red Letter Day of the 1913 Automobile Year. Remember the Date and Wait!

The Home Beautiful

DESIGN NO. 64

This plan stands out in bold contrast to the Bungalow types which form the major part of this collection. It is of the design known as a square type, two-story house, and is intended for a large family. No pains have been spared to make it convenient and no waste room is to be found anywhere, even the small space under the stair landing has been utilized as a place for shoes, and is reached by means of a small door in the Dining Room. A coat closet is put under the stairs in the Hall. The large Living Room with its brick mantel and large window seat makes a pleasant place for the family to gather and spend the long winter evenings. The Dining Room is ample for the use of a large family and is greatly enhanced by the window seat which may be kept filled with flower plants. A cool retreat for a summer evening is found on the screen porch opening off the dining room. The kitchen is free from built-in furniture, excepting the sink and a small china cupboard flush with the wall over cellar stairs. The Pantry is compact and complete with cupboard, and work table with bin and drawers under.

The second floor contains four large sleeping rooms, the two in front being connected with a cased opening being used by the parents and small children. The Bath is complete in every detail. The Attic furnished good storage room.

Cost with 2 rooms and hall, oak finish, $3200.00.
Width 27 ft. 6 in., length 30 ft.

FRESH SOUR CHERRIES ARE FEATURE OF TODAY'S MARKET

Fresh sour cherries are the feature

In business the rights of a competitor are usually respected. Not so in the telephone business.

In that line the Bell octopus works on the theory that a competitor has no right to be on earth even.

For some years our subscribers have been annoyed by Bell solicitors making a house to house canvas, urging them to throw out our telephone and help bring back the old monopoly with the high rates and poor service. The yarns they tell to help their cause are many and quite ingenious, but they don't seem to have much effect, as our list increases right along.

What would be thought of a banker, a grocer, a dry goods merchant, an insurance agent—a man in any line of business, who employed a small army of solicitors to visit his competitor's customers and by hook or crook try to get them away? Such work is despised by all fair minded people and in the end reacts on the party practicing it.

The Bell Company in its sworn report to the Railroad Commission on its Janesville exchange for 1911 showed a net profit of $69.85 for the year. It spends thousands of dollars trying to drive the Rock County Telephone Company out of business, and it makes up its losses in cities where it has a monopoly.

Twelve years ago there were 300 telephones in Janesville. The cost was $3.00 per month for residences. Today our company has over 2,300 phones and the charge is only $1 per month. That's the reason a telephone monopoly is not prayerfully asked for in Janesville.

CAMPAIGN MAP SECTION

HERE ARE THE STRONGHOLDS AND BATTLE GROUNDS OF BOTH PARTIES THIS YEAR

From Washington to Taft Tells Political Story of the Nation

Story of All the Great Leaders and Great Battles Takes Form from the List of Those Who Won and Lost.

A list of the Presidents of the United States, together with the names of their opponents and the parties they represented, is a history in brief of the political parties that have risen and fallen in the nation. It shows, in the first place, that, with one minor difference (the fact that it was known until 1854 as democratic-republican) the democratic party has borne the same title since the time of Thomas Jefferson.

The republican party as such dates from 1855, when John C. Fremont, its candidate, was defeated by James Buchanan, running on the democratic ticket. Prior to that year the party, with practically the same membership, had been known as the whig party. This party came into existence in 1832, its first candidate being John Floyd, who was defeated by Andrew Jackson, democrat.

The ancestor of the whig party was the federalist party, whose only successful candidates were George Washington in 1789 and 1792, John Adams in 1796 and John Quincy Adams in 1824.

In the 119 years from 1789 to 1908, the republican party or its predecessors, the federalist and whig parties, have elected seventeen Presidents. The democratic or republican-democratic party has been successful fourteen times. George Washington, calling himself a federalist, was elected President twice without opposition. But John Adams, federalist, in 1796 was opposed by Thomas Jefferson, democratic-republican, the first unsuccessful candidate of his party. Both were renominated, and in 1800 Mr. Jefferson became the first democratic President. His party continued to win success at the polls until 1824.

An inspection of the list, calls to mind the events that stirred the nation in the various periods of its history, through the names of the short lived parties that came into being from time to time as the occasion demanded. Such are the republican party of 1824, which had closer relations with the democrats than the republican party of to-day, and the national republican party of 1832, both of which chose Henry Clay as their candidate; the liberal party of 1844 and 1872; the free soil party of 1848 and 1852; the American party of 1856; the union party of 1860; the temperance party of 1875; the father of the prohibition party of to-day; the greenback party of 1876, 1880 and 1892; the populist party, which saw its full fruition in 1892, when, with James B. Weaver as its candidate, it polled 1,041,467 votes, and has been dwindling rapidly ever since; and the gold or national democratic party of 1896.

The prohibition party first made its appearance under that name in 1875. The socialist party was first entered on the ballots in 1900 as the socialist-democratic party. It changed its name to socialist in 1904. Eugene V. Debs, has been its nominee three times. The socialist-labor party presented its first ticket in 1904.

Shifting States of 1908 and 1910

States which gave republican pluralities in the Presidential election of 1908 and elected democratic Governors with all, part or none of the other democratic candidates in the State elections of 1910 or 1911 are Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon and Wyoming.

Indiana, Maine, New Jersey, New York and Ohio elected their entire democratic State tickets in 1910.

Connecticut, Idaho, Massachusetts, North Dakota and Oregon in 1910 elected democratic Governors and the republican candidates for the other State offices.

Wyoming elected a democratic Governor in 1910 and the rest of the State officers were divided between the two parties.

States in the democratic column in 1908 which gave republican pluralities in 1910 are Nebraska, Nevada and Tennessee. Nebraska elected the entire republican State ticket in 1910; Nevada elected a republican Governor and the remainder of the State officers were divided between the two parties. Tennessee elected a republican Governor and the remainder of the democratic ticket.

States in which the tickets in 1910 were led by candidates other than for Governor, are Florida, Missouri, Utah and Washington, where the Supreme Court nominees headed the ballots; Delaware and Illinois, State Treasurers; Indiana, Secretary of State; Montana, clerk of the Supreme Court; and North Carolina, State Auditor.

THIRD TERM RECORD STINGS NEBRASKANS.

OMAHA, Neb., Saturday.—The Chicago Convention, and particularly the position taken by the third term candidate, has played Hobb with the republican State nominees in Nebraska. In the probability, there will be a double set of republican candidates in this State. Before the National Convention Nebraska republicans held a primary election and placed in nomination a full set of candidates. The man they were third termers, and announced themselves against President Taft.

For the bolt and the formation of a new party has put a vastly different phase on the politics of the State. If the Nebraska remain true to the third term contingent and accept nominations from that party they must abandon their positions on the regular republican ticket. And to do this means certain defeat, as the Taft forces will at once fill the vacancies with men who will be recognized as the regular republican nominees. As such they will be entitled to be placed on the ballot under the regular republican head. On the other hand, the third term candidates must on the ticket as members of the progressive party and not as republicans.

Governor Aldrich, for instance, as a delegate to Chicago, was in the third term private quarters when it was determined to organize a new party, and was, by Governor Johnson, appointed one of the eighteen members of the committee which is to have charge of its convention. Before he was back in Nebraska two hours he was singing a different tune. "The whole thing appears too mysterious to even venture a guess upon," he said. And then he quit talking. The Governor's position is the same as that occupied by practically all the republican nominees in the State. If a third party endorses these candidates and adopts them as its own they will not receive the support of a single Taft man. And without the Taft republicans the party cannot hope to carry the State either for the State ticket or nationally. The Taft men are in control of the State machinery and there will be a big fight made against the third term candidates at the State convention.

lution really began in the Congressional and State elections of 1910 when a democratic landslide occurred.

This table shows the situation:—
Total vote in electoral college, 532.
Necessary to a choice, 267.
Republican reasonably sure, 155.
Democratic, 170.
Doubtful, 207.
Republicans to win must get 112 doubtful votes.
Democrats to win must get 97 doubtful votes.

This is a far different situation from that presented in the political map four years ago. At that time the electoral college numbered 483, and a majority vote was 242. The republicans at the outset of the campaign were reasonably sure of 206 electors and the democrats were reasonably sure of 101. The republicans needed only 38 more to win and the democrats needed 81. The doubtful States had an aggregate of 116 electors.

Must Fight to Win.
Of the States that are doubtful now Taft in 1908 carried Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, two in Maryland, Massachusetts, Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, West Virginia and Wisconsin. Ruminating Maryland entirely, here are fifteen States with a total of 151 electors. In the map to-day the States that are regarded as reasonably republican are California, Delaware, Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington and Wyoming.

This map undoubtedly will be criticised by democratic politicians because it has given some of these States to the republicans and because it has not made a larger list of doubtful States. The difficulty under which some of these democrats are laboring is that they regard everything as democratic this year. They believe the election is over and yet if they are going to capture the doubtful States or any of them and if they are going to take away from Mr. Taft any of the republican

No More Oil Monopoly in Janesville!

Kinnie & Son Have Opened a Station for the Sale of Pennsylvania Oils Averaging Higher Than the Monopoly Goods Now Obtainable.

A Welcome Departure From Trust Methods

Like the present political situation in the G. O. P. the oil monopoly in Janesville has been disrupted, and being firm believers in the old adage that "Competition is the life of trade", we are now prepared to furnish the former by supplying Kerosene, Gasoline and Lubricating Oils at the lowest possible price, consistent with quality, and to add to the life of trade that satisfaction which one feels when the goods are as good if not better than they have been represented.

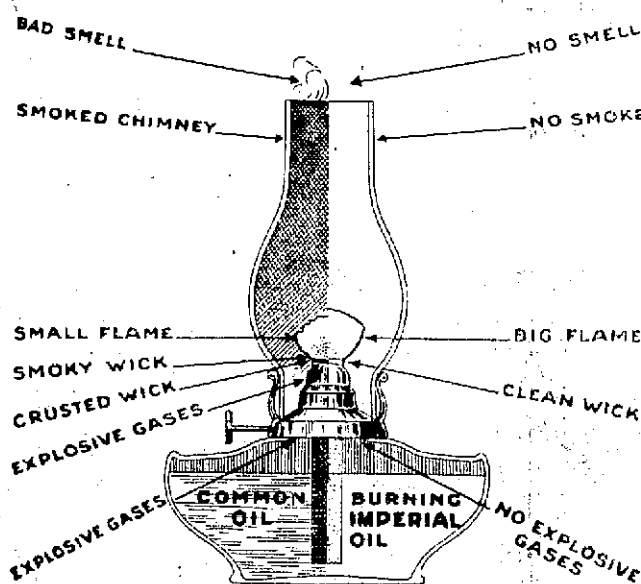

ALL OUR GOODS ARE THE PRODUCTS OF PURE PENNSYLVANIA PETROLEUM, WHICH IS THE HIGHEST GRADE CRUDE OIL IN THE WORLD. THIS CRUDE IS PARTICULARLY FREE FROM CARBON, ASPHALT AND SULPHUR, WHICH ARE SO DETRIMENTAL TO GOOD ILLUMINATION, LUBRICATION AND POWER, AND WHICH, FORM THE BASE OF ALL CRUDES FROM THE MID-CONTINENT AND WESTERN FIELDS, THE PRODUCTS OF WHICH HAVE BEEN SOLD HERETOFORE IN THIS LOCALITY. THERE IS JUST AS MUCH DIFFERENCE IN THE QUALITY OF KEROSENE, GASOLINE AND LUBRICATING OILS AS THERE IS IN FLOUR OR

COAL. WHY IS IT THAT YOU WILL PAY FROM 25 TO 35 CENTS PER SACK MORE FOR FLOUR, AND FROM 2 TO 4 DOLLARS PER TON MORE FOR COAL? BECAUSE YOU KNOW THAT THE BEST FLOUR IS MADE FROM NORTHERN WHEAT, WHICH IS SUPERIOR TO THAT FROM ANY OTHER REGION, AND THAT THE BEST COAL COMES FROM PENNSYLVANIA OR VIRGINIA, WHICH ARE NOTED FOR THEIR OUTPUT OF HIGH GRADE COAL. THE SAME IS TRUE OF THE PRODUCTS OF PENNSYLVANIA PETROLEUM, WHICH ARE NOTED THE WORLD OVER AS THE BEST FOR LIGHTING, LUBRICATING AND POWER PURPOSES.

FORMAL OPENING OF PRIMARY CAMPAIGN

Candidates for Various County Offices
Begin Their Canvass for Votes at September Primaries.

With the days of the county conventions, where candidates were nominated, but a memory, the formal opening of the summer's campaign for the pre-primary contest for nomination is now in full blast. On the republican ticket the office of sheriff is the most eagerly sought for. Four candidates: G. B. Merrill and C. S. Whipple of Beloit; Alva Maxfield of Janesville and F. M. Roach of the town of Harmony are the four contenders. All have been doing quiet work in the past few months and have many voters pledged, their nomination papers being liberally signed. That the second choice, or Mary Ann law, which gives the voters an opportunity to cast a vote for a first and second choice for nomination, will play an important part in the selection of a candidate for this office is certain. Of the four men who are in the field, two have run before—Merrill and Maxfield. The other two are new-comers for the office. Roach is a member of the county board and well known throughout the county, and Whipple is well known as a police officer in Beloit and the surrounding territory. It promises to be an interesting contest between the four.

For the office of county clerk, T. J. Atkinson is the only opponent that County Clerk Howard Lee has. Atkinson is not unknown to the voters having sought county offices before and is a strong campaigner. With a larger field he might make matters more than interesting for Mr. Lee and as it is he is making a bid for popular favor in his quest for the office he seeks.

While it is probable all the candidates for the office of state senator to represent the 22nd senatorial district, which now comprises Rock and Walworth counties, have not been announced there are at present two avowed candidates, Mayor Cunningham of Beloit and L. E. Gettle of Edgerton. Mr. Cunningham has made several sensational campaigns for mayor in the Line City and won out with handsome majorities. He is not a novice at the political game and is a strong progressive. Mr. Gettle is also no novice in the political game and has served as a member of the county board and also as a member of the legislature from the first assembly district of the county.

Thus far, except Simon Smith in the second assembly district, there are apparently no aspirants for the assembly jobs. It is possible that Grant U. Fisher may again seek the nomination for the assembly, and it is possible he may be a candidate for the state senate. Rock county now has but two assembly districts instead of three.

The other county offices are apparently to go by default as far as the republican contests are concerned, and the various candidates will be nominated without opposition.

STRONG NOW, BUT MUST FIGHT HARD TO WIN

States classed as doubtful they will have to fight desperately.

Good Start for Democrats.

The democratic classification includes all the States in the "solid South," and Arizona is also given as democratic. This classification gives the democrats 170 votes to start with. In most of the doubtful States with wise and popular nominations they will stand a better chance than the republicans because they have the advantage of notable and telling victories at the Congressional election. Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Maine, Massachusetts, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon and Wyoming all elected democratic Governors since they went for Mr. Taft in 1908.

The republicans start out in the campaign very greatly disorganized. One might suppose that after the terrific factional struggle in the party it could not win a victory anywhere. And yet it must not be forgotten that the business interests of the country who are opposed to tariff for revenue only and believe in the protective system as well as the financial interests that were practically drummed out of the Baltimore Convention by Mr. Bryan will be united for Mr. Taft.

These interests have actually controlled every election since 1884. They threw their influence for General Harrison in 1888, for Mr. Cleveland in 1892, for Mr. McKinley in 1896 and 1900, Mr. Roosevelt in 1904 and Mr. Taft in 1908.

In one respect the campaign of 1912 begins much as that of 1892. In 1890 the democrats swept the country and elected a democratic Congress. Two years later the democrats carried the country again because of dissatisfaction with the tariff, which had really impressed the business interests of the country favorably to Mr. Cleveland.

Even split into factions as it is, with the democrats of the West and Southwest arrayed against the democrats of the East, the advantage undoubtedly at the beginning of the campaign is heavily with the democracy. The republicans are in much worse plight in every way. They, too, have the factions of the West arrayed against the factions of the East. The effect of the disturbances at Chicago will be felt for a decade.

It is not the purpose in these observations to discuss the probable effect of a third party movement. The third ticket is not in the field. If it should be nominated and the third terms should run electoral tickets in most of the doubtful States, the effect might be like that of a two edged sword. The third party might, of course, and undoubtedly would, take many votes from Mr. Taft, but, on the other hand, it might prevent a great many votes from going to the democratic party.

Candidate for County Clerk

TO THE VOTERS OF ROCK COUNTY:

I have always voted the straight Republican ticket so far as National politics was concerned, but have been non-partisan in regard to local politics. I stand for principle and the man rather than party.

I am governed by no political faction or clique. I am after the office because I want it, and if elected I will try to work for the best interests of the office and all connected with it. If you, after looking up my reputation and character, can conscientiously support me at the primaries I shall appreciate the same very much, but if you are at all in doubt as to my ability or fitness for the office, I shall thank you to vote for the candidate you think best fitted for the same, thereby doing your duty to yourself and the county.

The splendid vote given me 2 years ago for Register of Deeds, especially in that part of the county where I am best known, is a testimonial as to my qualifications.

National Democratic Convention Put Four Young Men Into Political Hall of Fame

Senator Luke Lea, of Tennessee; Mayor Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland; Representative A. M. Palmer, of Pennsylvania, and Cone Johnson, of Texas, All "Youngsters," Were Striking Figures at Baltimore.

Four men new in national politics achieved prominence in the National Democratic Convention at Baltimore. Their forceful personalities compelled the attention of the delegates and the visitors, and even the elder statesmen of the party, better known as bosses, had to reckon with them.

Those men are Senator Luke A. Lea, of Tennessee; Representative A. M. Palmer, of Pennsylvania; Mayor Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Cone Johnson, of Texas.

Senator Lea is perhaps the most widely known. The youngest member of the United States Senate, his devotion to his wife, whose life he saved by transfusion, appealed to the chivalry of the world. He became prominent at Baltimore from the day of his arrival. He was at the head of what was known as the "steering committee" which tried to keep the Convention in control of the so-called progressives. He is a big, boyish looking man with a smile that is constant, and he always is where the fighting is thickest.

SENATOR LUKE LEA

Cone Johnson is a tall, loose jointed Texan who made a speech the first day of the Convention. No one knew him when, at a time the Convention was in turmoil, he walked to the platform and began to speak. His sincerity attracted as much attention as his words, and he commanded a hearing from an audience that was for action rather than oratory.

Who is Cone Johnson? That was the question asked by every one when his name became known. From Georgia he went to Texas several years ago, to practice law. From the outset he opposed Senator Joseph A. Bailey. Defeated once, he led the fight again this year and with Governor Wilson as a candidate he won and went to the Convention with a delegation of forty men.

Representative Palmer won his right to be one of the factors by defeating Colonel James M. Guffey, for many years the leader of the democratic party in Pennsylvania. In the primary contest he won seventy-six delegates. He is a Quaker, and made the motion for an adjournment over Sunday. Young and active, he was one of the floor leaders for the Wilson men and attracted as much attention as any man in the Convention. Mayor Baker, of Cleveland, looks more like an earnest young law student than the Mayor of a large city. He was a protégé of the late Tom Johnson and was attorney during the latter's administration as Mayor. Later he became Mayor, and in the primary contest was against Governor Harmon and for Governor Wilson.

He made the principal speech against the enforcement of the unit rule in cases by district primaries.

"I want to argue this case as a lawyer and win it on its merits," he told the delegates. "I gave my solemn promise to my people that I would vote in a certain way, and every good democrat should rally to the support of a man who wants to keep his pledge."

Mayor Baker, following in the footsteps of his great predecessor, Tom Johnson, has the hearty support of every true Clevelandite in the reforms he attempts to carry out in the city beside the lake.

MAYOR NEWTON D. BAKER

Brief Sketches of Presidential and Vice Presidential Candidates of Both Parties

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT.

Few men have been more bitterly assailed by a predecessor in high official station than has Mr. Taft by the man whom he succeeded in the Presidency, the man who has made a futile fight to oust him. Yet it was Mr. Taft's immediate predecessor who, less than four years ago, said that no man in the history of the country had ever come to the Presidential office better equipped for its duties than William Howard Taft.

The fulness of that equipment is an asset of President Taft alike by reason of heredity and training. His is the unusual distinction of having held appointive office at the hands of four Presidents and the even more notable one of having creditably filled two posts which were held by his father, Alfonso Taft—those of United States Circuit Judge and Secretary of War.

JAMES F. SHOOLCRAFT SHERMAN.

Vice President James Shoolecraft Sherman became prominent politically in 1894, when he was elected Mayor of Utica. After the expiration of his term of office, in 1897, he was elected a Representative to Congress from the Twenty-third New York district. He served until 1891, and in the following year he was sent as a delegate to the Republican National Convention. He was chairman of the Republican State conventions of 1895, 1900 and 1908. It was Mr. Sherman who, in 1908, when he was elected Vice President.

WOODROW WILSON.

In selecting as their candidate for the Presidency Woodrow Wilson, jurist, teacher, historian and politician, the democratic party for the first time since secession and the civil war has named for that honor a man born south of the Mason and Dixon line.

Though Woodrow Wilson is essentially a composite product of Northern and Southern environment, and though with that scholarly mental equipment and marked personality which placed him in the class of available Presidential material, he may be said indeed to be a cosmopolitan. He is a native of Virginia, the mother of Presidents.

The scholar in politics—that is what Governor Wilson's partisans have delighted to call him during the three brief years since he deserted the academic fields of the university teacher, the writer and lecturer for the noisier sphere of politics.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL.

Like his running mate on the democratic Presidential ticket, Thomas Riley Marshall, Governor of the historically doubtful State of Indiana, has held but one public office before his nomination at Baltimore. This is his present office, to which he was elected for the four year term expiring in 1913.

Like Woodrow Wilson, also, Governor Marshall has spent much of his life and devoted considerable time to university supervision and direction. For many years he has been a trustee of Wabash College, while honorary degrees have been conferred upon him by that institution, his alma mater, Notre Dame University and the University of Pennsylvania.

Governor Marshall, when it became known that he was a receptive candidate for the nomination, was described as "a progressive with the brakes set." It is this feature which has commended him to his supporters.

Jellied Knuckle of Veal.—Cover a knuckle of veal with cold water, let simmer two hours, then add one bay leaf, six cloves and salt and pepper to season rather highly. Return to the fire and let simmer another hour. If you have a fireless cooker the meat may be cooked in that to perfection.

ed, and a little Worcestershire or other preferred sharp sauce. Heat this and thicken slightly with cornstarch. The flavor is much like venison.

Pork cheese is an Italian method of using left-over pork. Chop the meat rather coarsely and mix it with a savory powder made of thyme, sage, parsley, salt, pepper and nutmeg in the proportion you like best. If you have a mushroom or two chop them finely and add to the mixture. Add enough rich stock to moisten the meat; press it into a mold and bake in a slow oven over thirty minutes. Slice when cold.

Summer Sausage.—This requires a little patience, but it is the only sausage mixture that should be eaten in the summer by those who fear the heating effect of pork.

Have your butcher grind one-third of a pound of lean fresh pork with two-thirds of a pound of veal or beef. If you have a meat chopper, you can chop it quite as well yourself.

Place the chopped meat in a mixing bowl and season with salt, pepper and spicy herbs; add one egg slightly beaten and a cup of cracker crumbs. Mix well and form into two-inch rolls. Fry in a very little fat. Or bake in a roasting pan. Roll a paste out thin and stamp in rounds. Into each put a sausage, cover and pinch the edges together. These should be served with gravy or sauce.

Cheese Scallops.—These are a breakfast dish; line patty pans with thin slices of cheese, first buttering the pans well so the cheese will not stick. Break an egg into the pan and cream. Bake in a hot oven fifteen minutes and serve on buttered toast. A delicious way to cook tomatoes is to serve with hot or cold pork or fish, is to cut the tomatoes across and put them in a pie dish. On each half put a generous sprinkling of sugar, cinnamon, salt and pepper, and three drops of vinegar and a lump of butter. If the flavor of onions is approved, you may add a finely chopped onion or sprig onion. Cook about twenty minutes in the oven or longer, according to the size of the tomatoes and the number of layers in the dish.

One Thing Certain.

When the late Francois Coppee was elected to the academy, he told his friend, Theodore de Banville, that he wished he were in, too. Banville, declined to canvass. "Suppose your nomination were brought one fine morning on a silver salver," "I don't know what I should do with the nomination," said Banville, "but I should certainly keep the salver."

Inscription Grew With Vegetable.

Vegetable marrows which, when young, had inscriptions cut on them were a feature of the exhibition of the Hornsey (Eng.) Allotment association. The inscriptions grew with the produce, and on one large specimen the Lord's prayer was neatly engraved.

Rat-Catching Woodchuck.

A pet woodchuck at the home of Johnnie Hughes of Cascade, Pa., catches mice and rats with the success and agility of a cat. It was its association with a cat that taught the chuck to become a "ratcatcher." The eye of the animal and its agent appear to be more acute than even a cat's. It will lie for half an hour at a rat-hole and wait for the rat to appear. It is generally sure death to the rat when the chuck makes a dive.

Perfect Coating for Hams.

"Mraslin" is the name of a substance that is used in Bohemia to coat hams. It is as pliable as rubber, tasteless and harmless, and keeps the hams—also meats, eggs, etc., perfectly fresh almost indefinitely. The mraslin can be peeled from the ham almost as easily as the skin from a banana.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of, and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and Tar Compound to other cough medicines because it quickly cures coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. Is safe for children. Remember the name, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and accept no substitute. Badger Drug Co.

The following announcement appeared in the Beloit Daily News and is here reproduced and published by authority of F. F. Livermore of Beloit, Wis.

LIVERMORE OUT FOR TREASURER

Encouraged By Many Promises of Support Throughout County, Beloit Man Announces His Candidacy.

F. F. Livermore of this city, today announced his candidacy for county treasurer at the primary election in September.

Mr. Livermore has had his candidacy under consideration for some time. It was first suggested by friends in Janesville, who urged him to make the fight for the office. These friends pointed out his fitness for the office and promised to work for him if he would say the word. He hesitated, however, to enter the campaign until he had received assurances of cordial support from other parts of the county.

These assurances he has had within the past few days until he now feels that there are hundreds of men in all parts of the county who will work for his nomination and election. Mr. Livermore is fitted by experience for the office he seeks and is thoroughly conversant with conditions in the county. His long experience on the county board and his interest in matters relating to taxation, even after leaving the board, are well known. Beloit will undoubtedly roll up a handsome majority for her home candidate and other parts of the county may also be counted on to give

F. F. LIVERMORE.

It banks it will be of special advantage to have the county treasurer a resident of this city.

MARY ELLEN'S WAY

She Persuades a Friend to Take a Water Trip

THE Swains have invited Angeline and me up to their summer camp in Maine," said Mary Ellen at dinner. "They wanted you to come but I knew you couldn't get away."

"No, I couldn't," replied Mr. Mary Ellen. "Besides, I don't think much of camping. But I am glad you and Angie can go. How are you going?"

"I think it would be nicest to go by water. That long train ride is so hot and dusty."

"But Angie gets awful sea-sick, doesn't she? Don't you remember she told us what a time she had coming across?"

"Oh, that's different. Besides she's just as liable to get train-sick. And it's a great deal worse on a stuffy train with no place to lie down."

"That's so," said Mr. Mary Ellen. "I guess the boat would be best."

"Angie is coming over to-night to talk it over, and I thought I would tell her how much nicer the boat would be. I am glad you agree with me."

Angie was delighted at the prospect of a week in Maine.

"And if we go up by boat," exclaimed Mary Ellen, enthusiastically, "we'll have the loveliest time going, too."

"Not for mine," said Angie emphatically. "At the sight of a boat my stomach goes flip-flop."

Mary Ellen laughed.

"Coast travel is different," she explained. "It isn't like being way out on the ocean. The Maine coast is heavenly. The water is so blue and the shores are covered right down to the water edge with green Christmas trees, and the waves dash against the rocks in great, snowy breakers—"

"That does sound good," said Angie.

"And it's so cool and no dust or noise," went on Mary Ellen, "like there is on a rushing, shrieking train, with a rain of cinders sinking into your hair, and your face getting all grimy from the smoke and dust."

"You do look a sight on a train," assented Angie.

"Yes, and on a boat," continued Mary Ellen, "you have a room all your own to dress in, or go lie down in if you get tired. And you know what a dressing room in a Pullman is."

"If there is one thing that exasperates me beyond endurance it is that waiting on a train to get into the dressing room."

"And there's precious little comfort when you do get in. I don't think traveling on a train is to be compared with that on a boat in summertime," concluded Mary Ellen, with conviction.

"I guess you are right," admitted Angie, "though—"

"And I have heard," interrupted Mary Ellen, "that people who are boat-sick are train-sick, too. And if you are sick on a train, you are up against it. You have no place to lie down, and it is hot and noisy and you can't get anything to help you. Whereas on a boat, you have your own room, it's cool, you have a stewardess and all the attention you need."

"Yes, that's true," said Angie. "But—"

"As I said," broke in Mary Ellen, "going up the coast is different from crossing the ocean. I know with your eye for beauty you would go into raptures over that coast of Maine, and you don't catch a glimpse of it from the train."

"Well, let's go that way," said Angie. "You'd just as lief, wouldn't you?"

"Oh yes," replied Mary Ellen. "It makes little difference to me. But I would really like you to see that beautiful scenery. You may never have another chance, and I wouldn't want you to miss it for anything in the world."

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

OFFENSIVE OPTIMISM.

IS THERE any virtue, I wonder, which, when carried to excess, does not become a vice, or at least a defect? It seems to me that the old Greek motto "nothing in excess" has even more of wisdom in it than appears on the surface.

I am thinking today especially of optimism. Optimism is certainly a most beautiful quality. I preach it, teach it and try to live by my own preaching and teaching. Indeed, Charles Reade's "Courage comrade, the devil is dead" is one of my favorite mottoes. And yet I have seen even optimism gone to seed and bringing forth thorns instead of fruit.

There are some people who are what I call offensive optimists. In an office where I used to work there was a most exaggerated example of this type. Mrs. R. was an optimist from the word go. Day after day she used to come into the office in the morning in a perfect fervor of enthusiasm and delight over her own affairs, and address us something like this:

"I am so happy this morning. My rich uncle has just sent me the loveliest bracelet from abroad," and then would follow a lengthy description of the beauties of this wonderful bracelet, its probable value, her uncle's wealth, some of his former gifts, etc., etc.

Or it was, "Oh, glad, but (her husband) is going to buy me the handsomest gown, one we saw in the window. He says I haven't had anything fit to wear for an age"—she who dressed infinitely better than any of us.

Or "My dear, isn't it perfectly lovely, I am to have a raise in pay the first of the month. I am so happy."

Aren't you glad for me?"—wasn't that asking a good deal when she knew that she already received twice as much as most of us, and knew that we knew it?

I have known pessimists who wore on my nerves, but none any more grating than this offensive optimist.

Surely you have known someone of her type, someone who, no matter what your mood, was always loudly calling on you to rejoice with him over his good fortunes. Now there is a great deal said about obtruding one's joys and sorrows on other people; is there not such a thing as obtruding one's enthusiasm and good fortune?

When the Bible says, "rejoice with them that do rejoice," it adds the complement, "and weep with them that weep." It does not advise a selfish and tactless optimism that persists in rejoicing, and in asking others to rejoice with you, no matter what their state of mind or their private troubles may be.

Maybe I'm very selfish, but there are times when, although I'm glad for him, I don't feel just like hearing all about my neighbor's wonderful good fortune. And perhaps I under-rate human nature, but I certainly have a lurking suspicion that there are a good many other folks who sometimes feel the same way.

Heart and Home Problems

by MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: A young lady I know has a birthday next week. Will you please mention a suitable gift that a young man might give her? She is about twenty years old, I think, and of a quiet disposition.

Do you know her taste in books? A pretty bound book, by some standard author, or a book of good verse, is always acceptable.

Flowers are always appreciated as a gift, and quite proper. Have them sent by a florist, with your card, in the box, writing on the card that you wish her many happy returns of the day.

If she likes candy, a box of the very best would be nice.

Candy, flowers and books are about the only permissible presents under the circumstances.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Do you think girls and boys ought to indulge in the "stamp flirtation"? I see so many of them asked for it in the papers, and I wonder that anybody encourages them by printing the rules. Please say what you think about it, as you are always so sensible.

MOTHEK. I will gladly say what I think about stamp flirtation and that

It sadly cheapens any girl who will permit it or carry it on.

There is no particular harm in it, though anything that cheapens a girl is harmful in the end. A boy certainly cannot respect a girl when he publicly announces, by the way, he puts a stamp on a letter to her, that he is flirting with her. And when he gets a letter from her announcing the same thing, he loses still more respect for her.

It is about the silliest form of flirtation that I know, and most forms are silly, though even the silliest often end in very serious unhappiness—usually for the girl.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please settle a dispute between two housewives.

One insists that butter should be served at all meals, while the other says that it is not good form to serve butter at a dinner. Which is right? ONE OF THEM.

At a formal dinner butter should not be served, though Americans usually break the rule.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What will take away the unpleasant odor after peeling or eating onions? We are very fond of them at our house, but I know the odor is not pleasant to others.

A FRIEND. Peroxide of hydrogen is one of the best deodorizers I know of. Bathe the hands with it after peeling onion, and rinse the mouth with slightly diluted peroxide.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I see so many girls wearing white shoes with dark dresses. They look queer to me. I suppose it is the fashion, but do you think it is good taste? I would like to hear your opinion.

OLD GROUGH. About two years ago some fashionable New Yorkers started the fad of white shoes with dark dresses, but soon abandoned it. It "caught on" with the people, however, and the custom has invaded the whole country.

No; I do not think it is good taste. White shoes were never intended to wear with dark dresses, and they make the feet look abnormally large under a dark skirt. White shoes soil so easily that they should be worn only with light dresses, and never in downtown streets.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a question to ask you. I have a husband who is very fond of me, but I know he is not a very good husband. I am very fond of him at our house, but I know the odor is not pleasant to others.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

seems wanting more and more, and we are actually being treated to an exhibition of men asking for their "rights," as well as women.

Let us hope that the new divorce situation will make girls choose their marital mates more carefully, and that a girl will rather take the safety of single blessedness than the possibility of a divorce after matrimony has made her a dependent.

Let us hope, too, that the quarrelsome wife will think twice before uttering her frequent threat of divorce. The worm may turn.

MORE MEN ASK DIVORCES.

Here is something to think about—and to think about very seriously.

Woman has prided herself thus far upon the fact that heretofore the large majority of applicants for divorce were women. It has been proof positive, apparently, that man is a tyrant and a brute, and that most men make undesirable husbands.

The divorce court has been woman's road to freedom. That man has not availed himself of it more frequently has been considered another proof that a wife is an angel imposed upon; that a husband knows he has a good thing and doesn't want to lose it.

Well, the husbands are waking up to the extent that now 50 per cent of the divorces are applied for by men. This in spite of the fact that there are many more grounds for divorce for a wife than there are for a husband.

It is not very flattering, is it? Perhaps some women aren't such abused angels, after all!

Perhaps Mr. Henpeck is going to have a little peace on earth in spite of Mrs. Henpeck. Perhaps the man who loves home and children and the simple life will seek another chance, with another wife who doesn't spend on "show" all that he can earn.

Maybe the husbands of the nagger, the sloth, the fault-finder, the gadger, the "nervous" woman, the married flirt and a few others one knows of, will ask freedom in the divorce court.

Maybe, too, the husband who is just tired of his wife, will manage to get rid of her in a perfectly legal way, so that he may have a fresh spouse.

Anyway, it behooves wives to consider this divorce matter, now, from both sides—the husband's as well as the wife's. Most divorces, if the truth were known, result from faults in both.

Of course there are men with whom no decent woman could or should live. But there is also the woman who takes advantage of a husband's habit of loyalty, by heaping countless miseries upon him.

A certain gallantry in the average man has kept many out of the divorce court. But gallantry toward women is disappearing, and the divorce court is becoming a more frequent resort.

Tells of the Days of the Famous Boxing Elephant With Adam Forepaugh Show

In the days when they used to turn the sod back, pile it up in a circle and then cover the ground inside with saw dust. When the clowns were really funny and the lady jumped through the paper rings, or the hoop of fire. When there was one or two rings and perhaps a platform for the trick bicycle riders or roller skaters and the spectator did not wish to be a dozen pairs of eyes to see everything at once in the three rings, two platforms, a half dozen aerial acts and thirty or forty funny clowns performing at once, those were real circus days.

Fifty years ago, Dan Rice and his wonder aggregation of world's wonders, passed through Wisconsin, later followed by a dozen other shows that were no less famous in their day and age. Pop Corn George Hall of Evansville was just breaking into the show business in earnest and travelling by wagon was the custom. Menageries and circuses travelled separately in those olden days. It was not until later by many years, before the railroad shows supplanted the wagon routes and the whole country became the field of operations of the circus rather than a meagre territory.

The circus manager who could offer the greatest freak, who could introduce the most elaborate entertainment was the one who showed the largest bank account at the end of the season. Barnum was always on the outlook for novelties and kept European agents in the field all the time to search for them. Not to be outdone, Adam Forepaugh also had his European agent and some tales could be told of the experience of these two show men and their European agents.

There are a lot of men whose hair is turning grey, who remember the days of John L. Sullivan, the boxing elephant, that caused such a sensation in the Eighties, with the Forepaugh show. It was a wonderful act, ever is wonderful yet, but then it had been attempted for the first time and was considered a marvel. This was only one of the many freak "stunts" show men undertook to please the public, but it is well worth recording.

David W. Watt, remembers these early days well and his little account of this boxing elephant is amusing. In the spring of '85, about the last of March, there was a bunch of about a dozen of us left Philadelphia and went over to New York to welcome the boxing elephant, John L. Sullivan and his sparring partner, manager and handler who had been touring the principal theaters in Europe for 14 weeks.

This boxing elephant made himself famous during the summer of '86 and '87, so that his fame reached Europe and a booking agency there had him booked for the winter of '87 and '88 at 14 of the principal theaters in Europe.

They opened in London early in December for three weeks at different theaters, where he proved to be a great drawing card and where there were thousands of people turned away. From there they toured the principal cities of Europe and the contracts for the party called for from $800 to $1,500 per week.

The party consisted of Adam Forepaugh Jr., manager, James McCarthy, who was for many years a famous clown in those days with the Forepaugh show, as handler, and a colored boy, Eph Thompson, who was his boxing partner.

This elephant was about six years old and about one-third grown. He wore a boxing glove about the size of a quart measure on the end of his trunk and he could certainly handle it as well as his namesake, John L. Sullivan in his palmy days.

He would side step and watch his chance to land one on the colored boy and when he did get one in just right, he often knocked him over the ring bank.

On their return they played in a down town theater in New York for one week, after which time they came over to Philadelphia, their home, and opened with the big show for the coming season of '88.

After we had been on the road for about two weeks, we showed in New Philadelphia, Pa., and while this boxing part of the program was being carried out, the young elephant took a notion to leave the ring. He jumped over the ring bank and lifting everything before him, ran his trunk under the seats and threw dozens of people high in the air and went out toward the canvas and on toward the country.

There were many hats, umbrellas and different things lost in the tumult and I was bent busy a good part of the afternoon settling bills of that kind. A young lady had her arm broken, and a boy of about 10 years old had his left leg broken and after we got everything settled the receipts of the afternoon were pretty well gone.

While the managers of the European theaters thought they paid well for their attraction, the party, which consisted of the elephant and four people, after all expenses were paid to Europe and returned, left what was a very full one, the bunch that winter, with the boxing elephant being an expensive lot.

We came on west and about the first of August opened on the lake front in Chicago for two weeks, and the boxing elephant was a big attraction for the show during the season. The elephant and the colored boy, would fight five rounds every afternoon and every evening and thousands of people in Chicago would come into the show just in time to see this act and go out as soon as it was over, and our engagement in Chicago this season netted the show a little over $11,000 a day.

While in Chicago a wealthy man from London, made a contract with Eph Thompson, the colored boy, to come to London as soon as the show closed and he said he would buy him a herd of elephants which he should train for different acts in that country.

After arriving in London the colored boy bought six elephants which he trained all during the winter and by the next fall they were ready to go into the different theatres there and for years he was famous in all Europe as the greatest elephant trainer in that country, and the last I heard from him, only a few years ago had won both fame and fortune and was living in London and was still in the show business.

Many people in Janesville will recollect the great aerial act of the Seegrist and Silbon family with the Barnum show last year. In '32 Adam Forepaugh brought two acts to this country from Europe one being three Seegrist brothers and the other the Silbon family of seven people. In this act last year in Janesville there was Tode Seegrist and Eddie Silbon. These were the only two living of the famous families that came to this country in '32. Tode Seegrist will be 40 years old next birthday and he turns two or three double summers high in the air every afternoon and every night, and he told me last summer that he never worked surer in his life than last year.

Of the famous bareback riders in those days James Robinson, who at that time was the peer of them all, is still living, his home being in Louisville, Ky. He has plenty of this world's goods and two years ago spent the summer at Delavan lake.

Madame Dookrell, who was a famous rider and whose husband for some years owned an interest in the Barnum show, has retired and is living at Delavan, Wis.

T. D. Coxsey, who has made a name for himself both in newspaper and magazine work, was for two years the newspaper man with the Adam Forepaugh show while I was with it. He is now doing magazine work and owns a nice home in one of the suburbs of Chicago.

Luella Forepaugh Fish, who lost her wild West show here a few years ago, has since regained at least a good part of her fortune in theatrical business. She is living in Cincinnati and runs two vaudeville houses and says she has had all she cares to do with the wild west show business.

One might go on and name a dozen other prominent performers of the Eighties and early Nineties and file the report that the majority of them were doing nicely and well to do. The performer who makes a success of the business must be sober and take care of themselves. The life is too hard, too dangerous, for abuses, and the ones who have reached the top, unless incapacitated by injuries, have almost always retired with sufficient to last them the rest of their lives.

Circus life is often painted as exceedingly hard and it is but there are many features of it that attract those taking part in the daily activities of a dog show, that make it hard to break the claims. The fascination of the life is something that is most hard to get away from and even the "razorbacks" grow old in the service and sometimes when a show pulls along the streets I have recognized many drivers I knew back in their early days with the circus.

The work of the management does not end with the close of the season. It only begins. The plans for the following years' campaign must be kept in mind and not only that but new acts must be booked, cars repaired, wagons repainted and novelties arranged for that will catch the public's eye. The bookings for the coming season are all mapped out during the winter. The press work drawn up and the campaign planned for us minutely as a general handles his soldiers in a battle.

There is no guess-work in the circus business. It must all be certain. Cyclones may sweep away a big canvas but the management must have another ready to reach them in a few days at most. Railroad accidents may destroy engines, injure performers, but other supplies must be ready and new acts planned for. The old days of the grating circus is gone. The management insists on good, clean men and women with their aggregations and they see to it they are such. There is as much business in the management of one of our big, modern circuses as there is in running a good-sized manufacturing industry.

Forecaster Foster Predicts Remarkably Low Temperature for Coming Week With Serious Droughts.

(Copyright 1912 by W. T. Foster.)
Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbances to cross continent July 16 to 20 and 22 to 26, warm waves July 15 to 19 and 21 to 25, cool waves July 18 to 24 and 24 to 28. The results of the disturbances covering ten days will include cooler than usual and a deficiency of moisture in two-thirds of the cotton and grain producing sections. Not far from July 23, a remarkably low temperature wave has been expected to cross the continent. This will bring the lowest temperatures of the summer months and temperatures will fluctuatingly rise from July 21 to August 10.

We are now at the beginning of the most destructive drought of the year, and very little rain may be expected during the next weeks. The final results of all this is problematical. Where the soil is already moist there need not be much of a scare, but where it is now dry the outlook is gloomy. Next disturbance will reach Pacific coast about July 27, cross Pacific slope by close of 27, great central valleys 28 to 30, eastern sections 31. Warm wave will cross Pacific slope about July 26, great central valleys 28, eastern sections 29. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about July 29, great central valleys 31, eastern sections August 2.

No Radical Storms.
Temperatures of that week will average about normal and rainfall below normal. Storm forces will not be radical but a good healthy movement of the atmosphere will bring rather pleasant weather. Most weather interests will center on crop conditions and everyone is interested in the crops; prices are about as high as we can bear. Gloom will overshadow the drought sections during the week of this disturbance while smiles and joy will come to those sections where moisture is sufficient. Big prices for farm products will be assured to the latter.

Slightly Warmer.
First disturbance of August will reach Pacific coast about July 31, cross Pacific slope about July 31, great central valleys Aug. 2, eastern sections Aug. 4. Cool waves will cross Pacific slope about Aug. 2, great central valleys 5, eastern sections 7.

This will be very much the same as preceding disturbance but will average a little warmer while the shortage of rainfall will continue. Not much energy in the storms, the atmosphere will be lazy because we will be entering a period wherein it is said that "all signs fall in dry weather," and by the way this is a very true saying. Most of the little details of my forecast for those sections where drought supercedes all other weather events.

There is more Calath in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years the medical men made a disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Once I have known Calath to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Halls Calath Cure, manufactured by E. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

SORORITY SISTERHOOD.

(By Howard L. Rana.)

The sorority sisterhood is a close corporation of undaunted females who refuse to associate with anybody who is not a member of the union. It is harder to get into a sorority which happens to be in a naughty mood than it is to break into the Daughters of the American Revolution with a crooked family tree and a jimmy. Nobody is allowed to be a member of a sorority unless she can throw the Greek alphabet three times in succession without tying her tongue in a double bow-knot. Every sorority has a form of initiation which is calculated to throw a series of collective shills into a candidate and make her mental posture wobble on its axis. It is never necessary to initiate anybody into a sorority but once, as the experience leaves the applicant in a very yellow and chastened frame of mind. After a sorority sister becomes able to translate the first book of the Iliad she is admitted to full membership, given the semi-annual pass-word and allowed to make the fudge. The order of business at a sorority meeting is as follows: Physical culture with the Greek language and the sorority bar; admission of candidates who agree not to reveal the secret work of the order to anybody; but those with whom they come in contact; balloting on vestal virgins who have forsaken matrimony on account of old age; holding the grand balling sign of distress for the benefit of sisters who have everything ready but the lull; and remarks for the good of the order relative to the ring service and the subjugation of the male sex; adjournment, both sine die and sine die.

WHO WILL APPOINT THE NEW ELECTORS?

Another Curious Problem is Noted With Reference to Wisconsin Election Laws.

One of the curious phases of the jumble of Wisconsin election laws is that the presidential electors are appointed by the delegates to the national convention. The office of delegate expires with the termination of the national convention.

Republican electors who want to resign are sending their resignations to a body that does not exist. Possibly there is some provision in the laws somewhere that the state central committee of the parties may fill these vacancies, but it is not in the chapter relating to electors nor is it to be found in the index of chapters relating to vacancies and State Republican Chairman Krumery, says that on resignations have been sent to him.

At Madison yesterday an opinion was given that the state committee was authorized to fill these vacancies, but time was wanted to look up the question.

The law provides for the meeting of the electors on the second Monday in January, at which time if there is any vacancy occasioned by death, refusal to act or other cause, the electors present shall immediately proceed to fill the vacancy, by ballot or by plurality of votes. But this provision only pertains to vacancies after election, not to vacancies before election.

If the state central committee has the power to appoint, another curious Republican situation arises. This body, like the delegate body that appointed the electors, is a La Follette body, presumably to a large extent at least in sympathy with the Republican national ticket, like some of the Republican electors who have resigned. Under these circumstances it will nevertheless have to appoint electors.

In passing the mass of election laws now on the statute books, which are often conflicting, it was not deemed important how the electors are named, for the simple reason that it was supposed that party electors would support party candidates. It is evident that the election laws of the state will require more overhauling when the legislature again meets.

The Three Guardsmen

ALEXANDRE DUMAS

And does that hinder you from telling me the second reason?

The second reason, M. le Chevalier, replied Kitty, emboldened by the kiss in the first place and still further by the expression of the eyes of the young man, "is that in love—every one for herself!"

Then only D'Artagnan saw at a glance all the advantage that might be derived from the love which Kitty had just confessed so innocently or so boldly—the interception of letters addressed to the Count de Wardes, intelligence on the spot, entrance at all hours into Kitty's chamber, which was contiguous to her mistress's. The perfidious deceiver was, as may plainly be perceived, already sacrificing in idea the poor girl to obtain milady, whether she would or not.

"Well," said he to the young girl, "are you willing, my dear Kitty, that I should give you a proof of that love of which you doubt? Are you willing that I should this evening pass with you the time I generally spend with your mistress?"

"Oh, yes," said Kitty, clapping her hands, "very willing!"

"Well, then, come here, my dear," said D'Artagnan, establishing himself in an armchair, "come and let me tell you that you are, the prettiest girl I ever saw."

And he did tell her so much and so well that the poor girl, who asked nothing better than to believe him, did believe him. In such conversations time passes very rapidly. Twelve o'clock struck, and almost at the same time the bell was rung in milady's chamber.

"Oh," cried Kitty, "there is my mistress calling me! Go—go directly!"

D'Artagnan rose, took his hat as if it had been his intention to obey, then, opening quickly the door of a large closet instead of that of the staircase, he plunged into the midst of robes and lady's dressing gowns.

D'Artagnan heard the door of communication opened. He could hear the conversation turn upon himself while Kitty was assisting her mistress to undress.

"Well," said milady, "I have not seen our Gascon this evening."

"What, milady, has he not been?" said Kitty. "Can he be inconstant before being happy?"

"Oh, no! he must have been prevented by M. de Treville or M. Desossart. I understand my game, Kitty. I have him safe!"

"What will you do with him, madame?"

"What will I do with him? Oh, Kitty, there is something between that man and me that he is quite ignorant of. He was very near making me lose my credit with his eminence. Oh, I will be revenged for that!"

"I thought madame loved him?"

"I love him? I detest him! A simple fool who held the life of Lord de Winter in his hands and did not kill him, by which I missed 300,000 livres a year!"

"That's true," said Kitty; "your son was the only heir of his uncle, and until his coming of age you would have had the enjoyment of his fortune."

"For all this," continued milady, "I should have had my revenge myself on him if I did not know why—the cardinal had not requested me to condone him."

"Oh, yes; but madame has not favored the little woman he was so fond of?"

"What, the mercer's wife of the Rue des Fosseurs? Has he not already forgotten she ever existed? That will do! Go into your own room, and tomorrow endeavor again to obtain me an answer to the letter I gave you."

D'Artagnan heard the door close, then the noise of two bolts by which milady fastened herself on her side, but as softly as possible, Kitty turned the key of the lock, and then D'Artagnan opened the closet door.

"Silence, silence! Begone!" whispered Kitty. "There is nothing but a wainscot between my chamber and milady's. Every word that is uttered in one can be heard in the other."

"I will go—later." And he put his arm around her waist. D'Artagnan's love for Kitty was little more than an idea of vengeance upon milady. The first use he made of the influence he had obtained over her was to endeavor to find out what had become of Mme. Bonacieux. But the poor girl swore that she was entirely ignorant on that head, her mistress never admitting her into half her secrets, only she believed she was able to say she was not dead.

As to the cause which was near making milady lose the confidence of the cardinal, Kitty knew nothing about it. But this time D'Artagnan was better informed than she was. As he had seen milady on board a vessel at the moment he was leaving that of her mistress. He would take advantage of the first moment of surprise, shame and terror. He might fail, but something must be left to chance. In eight days the campaign was to open.

"There," said the young man, handing Kitty the letter, sealed and addressed, "give that to milady. It is the Count de Wardes' reply."

Poor Kitty became as pale as death. She suspected what the letter contained.

"But what does this note contain?" she said.

"Milady will tell you."

"Ah, you do not love me," cried Kitty, "and I am very wretched."

In spite of the caresses with which D'Artagnan endeavored to console her, Kitty wept for some time before she could be persuaded to give her mistress the note, but she yielded at last.

CHAPTER XXVII.

In Which the Equipment of Aramis and Porthos is Treated Of.

ON entering his rooms the same day Aramis found a man of short stature and intelligent eyes, but covered with rage.

"I wish to speak with M. Aramis; is that your name, monsieur?"

"Yes; you have brought me something?"

"Yes, if you can show me a certain embroidered handkerchief."

"Here it is," said Aramis.

"That is right," replied the mendicant. "Dismiss your lackey."

Bazin being gone, the mendicant cast a rapid glance around him in order to be sure that nobody could either see or hear him, and gave a letter to Aramis.

The guardsman uttered a cry of joy at the sight of the seal, kissed the superscription with an almost religious respect, and opened the epistle, which contained what follows:

My Friend—it is the will of fate that we should be still for some time separated, but the delightful days of youth are not lost beyond return. Perform your duty in camp; I will do mine elsewhere. Accept that which the bearer brings you; make the campaign like a handsome true gentleman and think of me, who tenderly kiss your dear black eyes!

Adieu! or, rather, au revoir!

The messenger then drew from amid his rags 150 Spanish double pistoles, which he laid down on the table; then he opened the door, bowed, and went out before the young man, stupefied by his letter, had ventured to address a word to him.

Aramis then reperused the letter and perceived there was a postscript:

P. S.—You may behave politely to the bearer, who is a count and a grandee of Spain.

Bazin scratched at the door, and as Aramis had no longer any reason to exclude him he bade him come in.

Bazin was stupefied at the sight of the gold and forgot that he came to announce D'Artagnan. Now, as D'Artagnan used no ceremony with Aramis, seeing that Bazin forgot to announce him, he announced himself.

"My dear Aramis," said D'Artagnan, "are these the prunes that are sent to you from Tours?"

"You are mistaken, friend D'Artagnan," said Aramis, always on his guard. "This is from my bookseller, who has just sent me the price of that poem in one syllable verse which I began yesterday."

"Ah," said D'Artagnan, with a smile, "you sell your productions at their weight in gold; you are very fortunate, my friend, but take care or else you will lose that letter which is peeping out from your doublet and which comes, no doubt, from your bookseller likewise!"

"My dear D'Artagnan," said Aramis; "if you please, we will join our friends. As I am rich, we will today begin to dine together again, expecting that you will be rich in your turn."

Having put two or three double pistoles into his pocket to answer the calls of the moment, Aramis placed the others in an ebony box, inlaid with mother-of-pearl, in which he kept the famous handkerchief, which served him as a talisman.

The two friends repaired to Athos' dwelling, and he, faithful to his vow of not going out, took upon him to order dinner to be brought to them.

They went to find Porthos, and at the corner of the Rue Racine met Mousqueton, who, with a most pitiable air, was driving before him a mule and a horse.

D'Artagnan uttered a cry of surprise, which was not quite free from joy. "There's my yellow horse, Aramis!" cried he. "Upon that very horse I came to Paris."

"It is of a singular color," said Aramis. "I never saw one with such a hide in my life."

"I can well believe you did not," replied D'Artagnan, "and that was how

I got 3 crowns for him. It must have been for his hide, for the carcass is not worth 15 livres. But how did this horse come into your hands, Mousqueton?"

"Pray," said the lackey, "say nothing about it, monsieur. It is a frightful trick played up by the husband of our duchess."

"How has it come about, Mousqueton?"

"Why, we are looked upon with a rather favorable eye by a lady of quality, the Duchess of —; but, your pardon, my master has commanded me to be discreet. She had forced us to accept as a little keepsake a magnificent Spanish horse and an Andalusian mule, which were beautiful to look upon. The husband heard of the affair. On their way he seized the two magnificent beasts which were being sent to us and substituted these horrible animals in their places."

"Which you are taking back to him, I suppose?" said D'Artagnan.

"Exactly so, monsieur," replied Mousqueton.

"No; though I should like to have seen Porthos upon my yellow horse. Is he at home?"

"Yes, monsieur," said Mousqueton, "but in a very ill humor. Go on!"

And he continued his way toward the Quai des Grands Augustins, while the two friends went to ring at the bell of the unfortunate Porthos. He, having seen them crossing the yard, took care not to answer, and they rang in vain.

In the meanwhile Mousqueton continued on his way, and, crossing the Pont Neuf, still driving the two sorry animals before him, he reached the street where dwelt the lawyer and his wife. When arrived there he fastened, according to the orders of his master, both the horse and mule to the knocker of the attorney's door. Then without taking any heed of their future fate he returned to Porthos and told him that his commission was completed.

In a short time the two unfortunate beasts, who had not eaten anything since the morning, made such a noise with the knocker that the lawyer ordered his boy to go and inquire in the neighborhood to whom this horse and mule belonged.

Mme. Coquenard recognized her present and could not at first comprehend this restitution, but the visit of Porthos soon enlightened her. The anger which fired the eyes of the musketeer, in spite of his efforts to suppress it, terrified his sensitive lover. Porthos went away after having appointed a meeting with the woman in the cloisters of St. Magloire. The husband, seeing he was going, invited him to dinner, an invitation which the musketeer refused with an air of majesty.

Mme. Coquenard repaired trembling to the cloisters of St. Magloire, for she guessed the reproaches that awaited her there, but she was fascinated by the lofty airs of Porthos.

All that which a man wounded in his self love could let fall in the shape of imprecations and reproaches upon the head of a woman Porthos let fall upon her bowed head.

"Alas," said she, "I did all for the best. One of our clients is a horse-dealer. I took the mule and the horse for what he owed us. He assured me that they were two noble steeds!"

"Well, madame," said Porthos, "if he owed you more than 50 crowns your horse dealer is a thief."

And Porthos, turning on his heel, made a step to retire.

She hung herself upon the arm of Porthos and in the violence of her grief cried out:

"M. Porthos, I am ignorant of all such matters. I have done wrong, but I will repair that wrong, upon my word of honor I will!"

"And how will you do that?" asked the musketeer.

"Listen to me. This evening M. Coquenard is going to the house of M. le Duc de Chaulieu, who has sent for him. It is upon a consultation, which will last three hours at least. Come, we shall be alone and can make up our accounts."

"Ah, now that is speaking to the purpose, my dear!"

"You pardon me, then?"

"We shall see," said Porthos majestically.

Insect Bite Costs Leg.

A Boston man lost his leg from the bite of an insect two years before. To avert such calamities from stings and bites of insects use Bucklen's Arnica Salve promptly to kill the poison and prevent inflammation, swelling and pain. Heals burns, boils, blisters, pikes, eczema, cuts, bruises. Only 25 cents at Peoples' Drug Co.

Dinner Stories

Mayor Crump of Memphis was talking about two opposing factions in a nearby town. "They are as bitter," he said, "as the two Browns. The two Browns spelled their names differently—one 'e'—and they were dreadful rivals socially. They met one evening at a banquet, and Brown said with a sneer: 'A fool asked me today if I was any relation to you. I told him that if you had a single drop of my blood in your veins I'd cut it out of you. And if I had,' said Browne, 'I'd let you.'"

G. G. Netter, the secretary of the International Pure Food Association of the White Cross, was discussing in New York a campaign he has recently commenced against the French Menu.

"Where is the Parisian, let alone the American," Mr. Netter exclaimed, "who would know the meaning of 'dindonnau a la Wall Street,' or 'Pommes Taft,' or 'Poulet a la Sugar Trust'?"

"These menus puzzle everybody. That is frankly and universally admitted. I said the other day to a waiter:

"Waiter, these dishes are all in French."

"Yes, sir," he answered, "but the prices are in English. Most people go by them."

A wedding party was disturbed by the crying of a baby belonging to one of the women guests. One of the young ladies present remarked to the bridesmaid: "What a nuisance babies are at a wedding!" "I should say so," returned the latter, and added, with cut very full consideration: "When I send out the invitations to my wedding I shall have printed in the corner, 'No babies expected.'"

In an eulogy of the late supreme court justice, a Chicago lawyer said: "John M. Harlan had a way of pointing an observation with a story. Once he wanted to rebuke a man for exaggeration, so he said he was as bad as a Pittsburgh millionaire who was being interviewed by a New York reporter. 'Where, sir, were you born?' the reporter asked. 'I was born in Pittsburgh,' said the millionaire. 'And when did you first—er—see—the light of day?' 'When I was nine,' the millionaire replied. 'My people then moved to Philadelphia.'"

There is nothing that teaches more than experience. We therefore quote from the letters of two girls who suffered and were restored to health. The same remedy is within reach of all.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"Prior to taking the first bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered agony every month, but after your wonderful medicine had been taken a while I felt a little better, and after taking seven bottles of it I feel that I can truly say I have no more pain or inconvenience."

"As I am out in the business world as a stenographer, I come in contact with many girls, and when the opportune moment arrives I tell them about the Vegetable Compound and I know that quite a few are taking it."—HELEN CANET, 550 Dean St.

Another Girl's Experience.

Tishomingo, Okla.—"I am a stenographer and book-keeper, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved my life. If any woman would like to write to me I will gladly answer her letter and tell her what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. MATTIE COPENHAVER, Tishomingo, Okla.

In these days of high cost of living, a medicine that gets a man up out of bed and able to work in a few days is a safe and valuable remedy. John Heath, Michigan Bar, Cal., says: "I had kidney and bladder trouble for nearly six years, and was confined to my bed, unable to turn without help. Soon after I commenced using Foley Kidney Pills and was relieved at once. His example is worth following. Foley Kidney Pills will do for others just as much as they have done for John Heath. Try them. Badger Drug Co."

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, July 20, 1872.—The "Burned District."—The depot ruins have been fenced in and the neat and tidy sheds occupied as ticket offices by Potter and Noyes are the most prominent features of the locality. It is probable that the officers of both roads will be here next week to look over their losses and make arrangements for the reconstruction of a new depot.

Last night we went through John Roethinger's brewery vaults and found everything there cool but damp. The water poured upon the burning building had penetrated the vaults to some extent, damaging the ale, as stated by us yesterday.

Brief Items.—The merchants on East Milwaukee street, between the bridge and Main street, were busy with their haying this morning. Most of the grass was cut down with hoes.

A temporary bridge has been constructed from the bank of the river to a sand bar just above Hodson's mill for the purpose of obtaining gravel from the bar to be used in repairing the dam.

William Stevens, residing some two miles west of the city, reports that his house, valued at four hun-red dollars, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday night.

Obed Wallace of Chicago, and W. J. McIntyre of Whitewater, two of the old 12th battery squad from here, are in the city. The former intends to remain a few weeks.

Injured by a Reaper.—Hon. Willard Merrill received a telegram last night from Independence, Ia., stating that his little daughter, Jennie, was injured by a reaper. She is visiting with relatives of the family at Independence. Mr. and Mrs. Merrill left this morning for that place.

Later.—A letter from Independence, received this afternoon, states that Jennie was riding on a mower with her grandfather; that she wished to get off and pluck some flowers. He acceded to her wish and she got off in the grass to the right of the machine. Fearing that she might unknowingly place herself in front of the cutting bar of the mower the old gentleman pulled up the team for the purpose of warning her. Deceived by the high grass, Jennie placed her foot in front of the sickle just as the horses stopped. The keen edged knife struck her ankle, severing the tendon and cutting through to the bone.

Economy's a splendid thing, and if you practice it 'twill bring true comfort to your fading years, when wasteful people are in tears. SAVING When old age at your doorway tal knocks there's nothing like the good old rocks, the silver roubles of your dad's, the bones, the rhino and the scads. Age is the sweetest time of life, the evening of a day of strife, when all the tools are laid aside, and all the clamoring has died, when, at the setting of the sun, we look back on our work well done. That is, if we have laid away a package for the dying day; if we have, safe from moth and rust, the plunks, the lucre and the dust. And naught on earth can be more dire than Old Age lacking food and fire; Old Age, by fears and famine tossed, a-looking back on chances lost; Old Age that weeps and broods upon the golden years forever gone. Oh, gentle reader, blithe and bold, you like the rest, are growing old! Do you salt down each day a dime, preparing for that wintry time? Be wise and buy a savings bank—a little galvanized tin tank—and in it drop, and drop again, the lire, the kroners and the yen.

The Little One: "That's an ugly lump you have on your neck."
The Big One: "What can you expect with all these wireless messages flying around!"

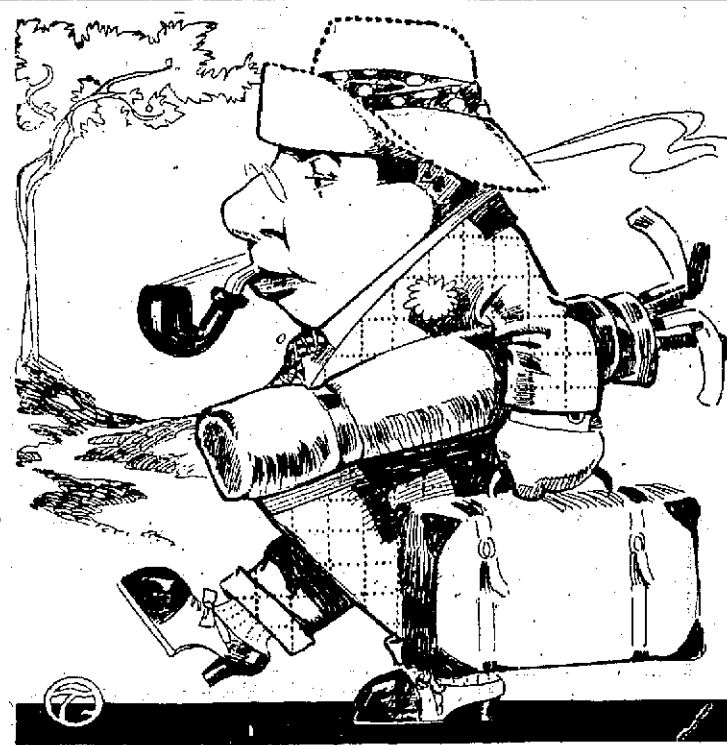

IF TOMORROW IS YOUR BIRTHDAY
Do not attempt too much or trouble will surely follow. A journey which you contemplate will be doubtful and may cause some interests of yours to suffer.

Those born Sunday, July 21, will be too thoughtless, selfish and sensitive, and will consider themselves abused when treated as they deserve. They will be intelligent enough to remedy these faults when they are made to realize them and to see themselves as they really are.

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY
Do not start any new enterprises.

For some anxiety will prevent you giving them sufficient attention. Think well before you accept gifts from others, as everything must be paid for and it is better to know the price before committing yourself.

Those born today: will be fond of travel and change and should take care in going from place to place. If they will understand the nature of their associates they will get along much better, as their own natures lead them into trouble.
